Max Bremer advises entrepreneurs and established companies on key transactions throughout the business life cycle, from formations and financings to mergers, acquisitions and divestitures. Max works with clients in a variety of industries, including health care IT, medical devices, data analytics, block-chain technologies, renewable and alternative energies, software, food and agriculture, transportation, and manufacturing. Max's financing experience includes deals built with private equity and debt financing (including seed, angel, strategic and venture capital investments). He also has handled public offerings and put together joint ventures.

In addition to his transactional practice, Max also often serves as outside general counsel to his clients, providing advice on a number of matters critical to their success. Max works hard to earn his clients' respect, and values the role he plays as a trusted advisor.

EXPERIENCE

Select representations in transactions include:

- A for-profit higher education company in its going-public transaction (by reverse merger with a SPAC) and subsequent public offering of its shares
- A privately-held industrial Ethernet and device connectivity company on its sale to a German strategic buyer
- A growing health IT company in several rounds of private equity and debt financing, including seed, angel and venture capital
- A high-growth serial acquirer in the collision automotive repair space on many key acquisitions
- A social commerce company in multiple rounds of preferred financing
- An emerging head impact monitoring company in connection with several rounds of growth capital and general corporate matters
- A high-growth health care company in the drug and alcohol recovery space on its sale to a private equity fund
- A U.S. subsidiary of a Japanese public company in the industrial HVAC space on multiple strategic acquisitions
- A block-chain technology company in its formation of an "opportunity zone"

fund" to raise equity capital
