Amy Kline is a litigator with extensive trial experience in federal and state courts, as well as before private arbitration panels. She has tried to verdict more than 20 litigation and arbitration matters, and argued before federal and state courts of appeal. Amy has particular experience representing insurance and reinsurance companies in complex civil litigation matters. Amy is also lead litigation counsel to an international electronic media retailer, for whom she prosecutes and defends breach of contract, fraud and commercial litigation claims.

Amy also represents clients facing large-scale investigations, including responding to governmental investigations. She played a key role in Saul Ewing Arnstein & Lehr's representation of a major public university in investigating and responding to preliminary findings made by the U.S. Department of Education as to the university's alleged violations of the Jeanne Clery Disclosure of Campus Security Policy and Campus Crime Statistics Act. Amy has also represented this university in responding to a Title IX compliance review and other civil litigation matters.

In addition to her legal practice, Amy is an adjunct professor of law at Villanova University School of Law, where she teaches courses on civil pretrial and judicial externships.

Amy is an avid runner and triathlete. She has competed in numerous marathons, half marathons and multi-sport endurance events, including Ironman Lake Placid 2014.
